Yeephaa or something like that. Well, Redneck is the New Black!? The Danish of 9000 John Doe beat us round the head with music that can be titled as Hillbilly Hardcore. They try it at least and they're doing it well.

Of course, Hardcore leads here more than the Texan Hillbilly music. According to enclosing note the guys coquet with the image of hillbilly (only musically) but I don't buy it because the Danish are simply not any Texan Hillbillies. Well, they must not be. The label named the genre as Rock 'n' Metal but I would rather name it Death 'n' Roll or better still Hardcore 'n' Roll.

In the best manner of Hardcore screams the front man through the songs riddled with crunchy guitar riffs. Now and then it flares structure that reminds a little bit of Hillbilly but they carry no weight because the typical instruments like a banjo are missing. That would have been really interesting if they had used the typical instruments. The musical image would be more credible then.

Nevertheless it is an enjoyable album. Sometimes it reminds me off Entombed at the times of "To Ride Shoot Straight and Speak the Truth".

Hardcore-wise shouts and deep growling guitar riffs as well as songs which rock out with speed raise no boredom as the arrangements are very well-made.

Conclusion:

For sure it is an album for the next party. But one should not expect too much of the word "Redneck" in the album title. However, fans of Rock 'n' Rolling Hardcore can grab it with pleasure.
