Releasedate: 04.09.2015

The guys from Lima have already played music since 2009 and now they will release their debut album to the metal community at the beginning of September 2015. Some demos and EPs have already been released. I work up curiosity based on the promo sheet and dig my talons into "A Filthy Orgy Of Horror And Death".

Firstly, extremely guttural and spitting vocals bomb into my ears. On that point, one can also listen to diabolic-rattling drums and glorious raw guitars. This style of sound reminds me instantly of the illustrious days of Celtic Frost, Bathory and co. Furthermore, there is the sinister voice of frontman Envenom. By doing this, the name of the band has really been implemented into the musical program.

Several styles as well as rage and rawness are mixed up on the album as a result. One can also listen to a slight punk impact that lets the music become an awesome mix of Thrash, Black and Speed Metal elements in the end.

Although the production sounds raw and has an Old School touch, the mix is still produced forceful and energetic. I find it extremely agreeable and fortunately no one must deliver the quality of a cassette recorder with overdriven noise in this day and age.

My personal highlight is "Fuck Off (We Murder)" and "Death Cold Blood". The first named song is simply made to rock out. The second one forms a positive contrast to the rest of the album as it seems nearly doomy and especially the speed rattles really awesome. This is where Morbid Slaughter presents their richness of variety.

Unfortunately the album is with its 28 minutes too short for a full-length album and therefore it gets one point lesser.

Conclusion:

The silverling convinces in its entirety! One who likes the old albums of Mayhem, Beherit or Bathory should not hesitate to grip one and enjoy it. The simple mix of raw energy and joy of playing makes this opus to a really Old School Underground hint. I absolutely keep this band in mind and I am excited about what there's more to come.
