There are bands which exist over 20 years, share the stage with big stars like Helloween or others, release some albums and still aren't that well known outside of the metal underground. InnerWish is such a band. The Greek musicians release their fifth and self-titled album already.

The reason for this circumstance is not necessarily the musical quality; this is proven by the first headbanger-track of the album: "Roll The Dice" which is very concentrated on the riffs and the catchy refrain. This track makes me very curious of this album indeed. The emphasized doublebass midtempo track "Broken" and the stomping hit "Modern Babylon" do their jobs well on stereo, so live they must be stunning.

In general, I can insure that there is no track which makes my hand wants to push the skip-button. Especially some songs shine out: the dark one "Serenity", the groovy and very cool chorused "Sins Of The Past" and the ballad "Cross The Line" with the striking, throaty and yet melodic voice of the new singer. Without seeming high polished the clean, straight and forceful production of the album tops everything.

Conclusion:

InnerWish produced a great and solid self-titled power metal album, which may be too long for one or two. But the quality of the songs will absolutely compensate the nearly 70 minutes.
