Is this the Black Metal band Luzifer? No, it is not. Lucer from Denmark dedicate their music to classic Hard Rock, comparable with bands like White Lion or The Summit. No surprise that the three guys may go on tour with Mike Tramp soon. The promosheet says Lucer is the most promising band in the near future. If that is true, we will see! So let's put in the CD and push play...

The opener "Midnight Sun" is a very groovy opener. It's funny how some riffs remind me of colourful pictures and situations. At first I remembered a comedy show on the German telestation SAT 1 and then a picture of a cabrio with a couple of guys advanced the scene in my head. Both means fun. OK, maybe the comedy show means less fun than the cabrio. However, the feeling of the song is great and lets the band seem very congenial.

The guys have fun with what they do. They recorded the tracks very solid and the vocals of singer Lasse Bøgemark contributes to my sympathy for the band.

Now I want to say something about the production. It is a very straight and clean production which reminds me of the typical mainstream-radio sound. That is not a negative note, in my opinion there is a prominent feature missing which had to make the sound special. So I am wary because of the replaceable sound and production, if this band is the promising band in the near future. It's all for Public Relations. The songwriting seems also to be made for the radio-community.

The most songs have a running time over three and a half minutes, which explains the album-duration of almost 37 minutes. Some songs like "Too Late" are very boring, they leave me cold. Quite the opposites are the songs "I Don't Wanna Know" and "Bring Me Good News" – they bring a smile to my face because they show the fun the band had while playing these songs. I wish there had been more moments like these, especially in consequence of the short duration of this album.

Conclusion:

It is hard for me to assess this band. The technical cut is great and the production of the album is very good – but it's meant for mainstream. That is not a bad point but after the fourth playing, for me it's enough already. Sadly, there are just a few highlights on the half hour-album "Bring Me Good News". Only sympathy for the band is not good enough but who knows what the future brings?

Rating: 6/10
